

CONTRACT IS LET FOR LAKE PILES

Start to Be Made at Once for Boulevard Around West Side of Carter Lake.

TO FILL BETWEEN WITH SILT

Superintendent J. B. Fimmel has entered into contract with Craig & Hies for the driving of 125 piles between the Cornish bridge and the Illinois Central bridge at Carter lake, this being the first part of the construction of a retaining wall for which Mrs. E. L. Cornish gave $5,000 to the city this week.

The retaining wall will be 1,150 feet long and there will be nine feet between each pile, which will be driven into two feet of water about sixty feet from the present shore line.

The piling will be caulked to "dead men" which will be anchored in the shore. The spaces between the piling will be closed with two-inch sheet piling, thus forming the "wall."

The water area between the wall and shore will be filled in with silt dredged from the lake, and eventually it is proposed to extend the Carter park boulevard system along this west side of the lake.

The piling work will be started Tuesday. A carload of material is ready for the work.

Filipino Who Is Winning Honors at Bellevue College

Favita Eulalio Dagdag is a popular member of the freshman class of Bellevue college. He plays on the class basketball team, debates, declaims and only last week displayed real oratorical ability in the Clarke oratorical contest.

Dagdag was born in the Philippine islands, February 12, 1893, of worthy and ambitious parents. At the age of 8 he was sent to a Spanish school in Iligan, P. I., where he learned to speak and write the Spanish language. In his sixth year at that school he won first place in the contest of oratory, which entitled him to the scholarship "La Primera Promesa de la Colegio."

"But 'Dag,' as the fellows call him, was tired of the Spanish school, and so decided to enter the American school and to master the English language. His first book was Baldwin's First Reader, which begins, "This is a box. This is a ball," with accompanying illustrations. English proved very difficult and throughout the year he was often tempted to give up in despair. He stuck to it, however, studying hard, asking questions, reading books in the vacations, until he gained a working knowledge of English and a high rank among his fellows. In an inter-school contest he won first place in dictation and second in spelling.

The third year at the American school he was made a happy man by being chosen catcher of the invincible base ball team, which never lost a game. He kept his position as catcher until five years ago, when he decided to come to America. For two years after Dagdag reached this country he worked on a farm in Oklahoma. But he was too ambitious to stop there, so two years ago he came to Bellevue and entered the academy. He has more backbone and work in him than six ordinary boys, as his record shows. Last year he graduated creditably from the academy and, this year, entered the college.

Dagdag aspires to be a lawyer. He is sure that in good time the United States will give his people the political freedom which President McKinley promised them. His nation will then need trained men to guide the ship of state, and Dagdag wants to be a man ready to take his place on that boat.
